252 LAKE STREET, GRIMSBY, ONTARIO

Two Hundred and Fifty-two Lake Street known locally as Ledingham Cottage, was constructed in 1879 within the Grimsby Beach Area which served as a methodist meeting ground from the mid 1800's to the early 1900's. By an act of parliament the Ontario Methodist camp ground officially became the Ontario Methodist Camp Ground Company and was chartered in 1875. It was this company that subdivided the land and built the first picturesque cottages on former tent sites. The Ledingham Cottage was leased to two ministers before an ancestor of the Ledingham family Charles Gillard Hardie, a successful entrepreneur from Hamilton, first leased the cottage in 1910. The cottage was passed onto this son-in-law, Walter Edwin Prescott, a methodist minister, who in turn passed it on to his daughter, Aleda, who married into the Ledingham family. The Ledinghams became the longest and best known summer residents of the cottage. Aleda was a graduate of the University of Toronto with a degree in chemical engineering at a time when women were not expected to enter into this male dominated profession. In a sense, she was a pioneer for the future advancement of women's equality.

Ledingham Cottage is an excellent existing example of the victorian architectural style that was once prevalent throughout the Grimsby Park Area. These cottages were characterized by board and batten siding and gingerbread fretwork. They were originally built using a "balloon framing" construction method where the outer walls were raised first and the floors were added later. The construction of Ledingham Cottage lacked many amenities such as insulation and proper footings. Interior modifications have been made to modernize and improve its year round livability such as insulation. This cottage, however, has retained many of the finer external design details which have since been removed or covered on other cottages in the area. The most prominent victorian attribute is the decorative fretwork trim. The barge board, decorative railings and other intricately detailed trim add to the appearance of opulence. The barge boards serve to conceal exposed rafters and the ornate trims adorn what is in reality a relatively plain and simple structure.
